

Correspondence of The N. Y. Tribune.
LONDON, Friday, Oct.

For these evils are very much diminished. This is the only practical remedy The Times can devise for these grievances; and it justifies it on the ground of English practice. "Our village peasantry," says The Times, "are justified about cottage to cottage, or from cottage to no cottage at all, as freely and with as little regard to their personal tastes and conveniences as if we were removing our pigs, cows and horses from one sty or shed to another. If they cannot get a house over their heads they go to the Union, and are distributed—the man in one part, the wife in another, and the children again somewhere else. That is a settled thing. Our peasantry bear it, or, if they can't bear it, they die, and there is an end of it on this side of the grave; though how it will stand at the great audit, we leave an English Catholic to imagine. We only mean to say that in England the work has been done; cottiers have been exterminated; small holdings abolished; the process of eviction rendered superfluous; the landlord's word is law—the refuge of the discentrated reduced to a

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, Nov. 13, 1892.
 The annual election of Directors of the Bank of the City took place this morning.

One of our very vigilant police officers arrested the driver of a slow-wagon in this city last evening, thinking by driving too fast he was choking two boys who were sitting on the seat of the wagon with their heads over the crowd. After the police officer this morning the watchman was compelled to laugh himself at the ludicrous mistake he had made in driving fast to escape the crowd that naturally would have surrounded the vehicle were he trotting in their usual way, with their heads down. The driver was discharged.

A deadly fight with firearms took place in the eastern part of Kensington, about daylight yesterday morning, between two men, one of whom was a fire company. The fight was attended by three or four persons. The bells were rung, and the fire company of several of the bell was summoned. It seems there were a number of shots of alarm of fire during the previous night, all of which parties of powder in Kensington thought a disposition to riot.

The last alarm occurred about 5 o'clock. After it was over, and the firemen had hoisted their apparatus, the

$2 notes of the Harrisburg Bank; one $1 bill of the Lancaster Bank, and some money of the Western Bank. The prisoners were temporarily held by the Mayor in default of $1,000 each. They were afterward taken up into the United States Court, and committed in default of $200 bail each for a further hearing to-morrow. The officers had a satisfaction of conscience, until their superior

Further, it may not be amiss to refer to history for the purpose of throwing a light on the subject. King Henry came to the throne in 1299, having first deposed his cousin, Richard the First. The chief agents of this usurpation were the Percys—Northumberland, Worcester,

The fair speaker then proceeded to show that the weak man and the ignorant man ought to have

The front of No. 339 Broadway was completely draped in black, and in the center a canopy seventy feet high, surmounted by the American eagle, holding in its claws the Constitution. There was an urn at the canopy.
